THIEF GOT INTO PETER'S HOME

A Gentlemanly "Raffles"
Made Himself at Home
While Family Was Away

USED THE NEW AUTOMATIC

Entered the House Through Rear
Kitchen Window—Nothing of Value Taken

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Peters in North Perkins street was entered last night by a thief between the hours of eight and ten o'clock, but was evidently frightened away as nothing of value was stolen.

The drawers of the library table were rifled and several parts of the house ransacked. The would-be thief made his entrance through a window in the kitchen after he had made an investigation of the premises, according to the neighbors.

Mrs. George Osborne, who lives south of the Peters house, says she heard someone on the front veranda, and shortly afterwards saw the window blinds of the two front rooms pulled down.

"Raffles" made himself perfectly at home, using the telephone as was evidenced by the telephone book being taken from its regular place, and according to several of Mrs. Peters' friends who phoned between eight and nine o'clock and got the "busy buzz." The tracks of a man who wore a number eight shoe were found near the kitchen window. The family was out spending the evening with friends.

Walter Frazier and Raymond Price, two young men of Henderson, were indicted by the grand jury for disturbing a religious meeting at that place.

They were arraigned before Judge Sparks this morning and fined $5 each and costs, the whole amounting to $15 each.

HOLIDAY TRADE HAS OPENED UP

Corn and Stock School Responsible for Farmers Buying
Early and Heavy

The district corn and stock school here this week is attracting many farmers to this city and as a result the merchants are enjoying a good holiday trade. Monday and today nearly all the local business men were surprised by the amount of Xmas shopping.

Sample fairness to the trade of your own town should impel you to buy your goods at home. You will go far to find in a bigger town than this such cordial and painstaking effort to please and at reasonable prices, their fellow men as has been made by our own merchants. Buy at home and let's stand together "for home and native land."

The committee appointed by T. M. Green, president of the Telephone company, to investigate certain statements made by one of the directors met last night, but were not ready to report to the board of directors.

RILEY AND KIPLING COMPARED IN REAL ART

Will Be the Subject of The Lecture Course on Wednesday Evening

The committee on the Rushville lecture course have been very fortunate in securing Mr. and Mrs. Day for the number to be given at the Main Street Christian church on Wednesday night.

The subjects are "The False Ideal and the Real in Art, Riley and Kipling Compared," Mrs. Oranne Truitt Day has been of great assistance to Mr. Day, and has in the last two seasons demonstrated her right to recognition as a reader of unusual charm.

Working in harmony with Mr. Day to produce a well balanced and artistic program, she is as quiet and natural in her share of the entertainment as he is in his.

OFFICER MAY GET HIS SWORD

After Forty Years J. W. Tompkins Locates a War Time
Treasure

LOANED IT TO COMRADE

When he Came Home on a Furlough. Old Soldier Lives in Kentucky

It was near the close of the civil war that John W. Tompkins became ill on the battle field and was sent home on a furlough. At that time he was first lieutenant and when he was about to leave, the first orderly, who was to induct him in rank, asked that he be permitted to use his sword. Those were the days of the true gallant and Mr. Tompkins, though he treasured his sword dearly, gladly gave his comrade the emblem of office, admonishing him that it was to be returned at the end of the battle or in event he returned to the service.

From that day to this Mr. Tompkins never laid eyes on the sword and every effort he has made to recover it has proved fruitless; but last week he received a letter from a lieutenant in the mountain district of Kentucky, saying he had just learned Mr. Tompkin's address and upon receiving an answer to his letter he meant to express the sword forthwith.

Mr. Tompkin's stocking of joy will be filled to overflowing on this Christmas for no one but a soldier can fully appreciate the feeling a "warrior bold" has for the gun or sword he carried in a conflict.

FORMER RESIDENT ALMOST KILLED

T. H. C. Hilligoss Thrown From Vehicle in Runaway Along
Mountain Road

T. H. C. Hilligoss, a former citizen of Rushville, writes from Manitou, Colorado, where he conducts a hotel near the entrance of the "Garden of the Gods," one of the most beautiful and picturesque spots in America.

Mr. Hilligoss relates an exciting experience he had three weeks ago that he will not soon forget. He was driving a team of horses when they ran away along a dangerous drive, throwing him out and rendering him unconscious. He was carried home on a stretcher, and for several days struggled against odds. At last he recovered sufficient to warrant a permanent recovery, and a week later was able to write a letter, although he only has the use of his right hand.

The committee appointed by T. M. Green, president of the Telephone company, to investigate certain statements made by one of the directors met last night, but were not ready to report to the board of directors.

OPPOSITION TO WATSON'S BILL

Members of Board of Trade
Will Make Fight on Grain
Measure

OPPOSE FEDERAL ACT

Watson's Bill Would Protect Farmer and Small Dealer from Unscrupulous Dealings

Indianapolis, Dec. 17.—The members of the boards of trade at Chicago, New York and other large cities intend to make a fight to defeat the federal grain inspection bill introduced in congress by Representative Jas. E. Watson. At a meeting at the Claypool hotel they outlined their plans. However, members of the Indiana Grain Dealers' association declared in favor of government inspection of grain. E. M. Wasmuth of Roanoke, Ind., former president of the association, asserted that the small dealer and country shipper wants uniformity in the grading of grain. The resolutions adopted by the Indiana association in favor of government inspection were read by J. M. Bradford of Indianapolis. B. B. Minor, representing the Indianapolis board of trade, said that it is opposed to federal inspection, but that it may come unless the boards of trade and the dealers get together and adopt a uniform system of grading. Watson's bill is intended to protect the farmer and the small dealer from the unscrupulous game played by the gamblers operating on the boards of trade. Federal inspection, it is said, would result in a uniform system of grading that would protect the farmers and small dealers from the gamblers.

Sunday funerals, it is argued, detract from the regular services of the day and works quite an inconvenience for ministers. When a minister has his morning and evening sermon to deliver, generally he enjoys spending the afternoon in rest. Again it conflicts with some of the services in the afternoon and often discommodes many people.

It has long been a practice of the Roman Catholic church never to conduct a funeral on Sunday except when absolutely necessary, and it is likely that Protestant churches throughout the country will adopt a like practice.

GOOD PROMOTION FOR CLIFFORD LEE

Succeeds C. C. Lyons as "Emergency Man" on the Indianapolis Star

Clarence Casper Lyon, for many months editor of the Shelbyville Republican, but lately political and "emergency" writer for the Indianapolis Star, though he still retained his position as editor of the Republican, has accepted a position as managing editor of the Dayton, Ohio, Morning Journal. The Dayton paper is owned by George A. McClellan, formerly manager of the Star league of papers.

Clifford Lee, formerly city editor of the Rushville Daily Republican, will succeed Mr. Lyon as "emergency man" on the Indianapolis Star.

Ministers of Rushville Oppose the Practise of Funerals on Sunday

ADOPTED RESOLUTIONS

Burials on Sunday Work Quite an Inconvenience to Preachers and Services

If you are thinking about dying, please make arrangements to pass away from the first part until the middle of the week so that you can be conveniently buried on some other day than Sunday.

At a meeting of the Ministers Association yesterday, which all the Protestant ministers of Rushville attended, resolutions were adopted opposing the practice of conducting funeral services hereafter on Sundays.

The resolution reads: "It is the sense of this meeting of the Ministers' Association that we oppose the practice of the Sunday funeral, except when absolutely necessary for health reasons."

Sunday funerals, it is argued, detract from the regular services of the day and works quite an inconvenience for ministers. When a minister has his morning and evening sermon to deliver, generally he enjoys spending the afternoon in rest. Again it conflicts with some of the services in the afternoon and often discommodes many people.

REV. SMALL AND HIS DEVIL TALKS

Southern Evangelist and Lecturer Comes to Rushville Next Friday Night

Rev. Sam Small, journalist, lecturer, evangelist and soldier, will be here next Friday and will deliver one of his characteristic lectures on "His Majesty, the Devil" at the United Presbyterian church.

Of Rev. Small, the New York World once summed him up: "He uses no visible notes, but speaks extempore with a fluency and beauty of diction that is possible to but few men of a generation. He is a radical in thought, but a humorist in expression, and these two traits explain his enduring success as a public lecturer."

No admission will be charged at Friday evening's meeting.

ART EXHIBITS IN THE CITY SCHOOLS

The Rooms are Being Tastefully
Decorated for Friday's Public Reception

The exhibition of drawing work of the city schools will prove an excellent opportunity to observe the excellent work of this department. Work will be exhibited in each of the buildings, and the hours for visitors are from 9:00 to 11:00 a. m., and from 1:00 to 4:00 p. m., Friday, December 20th.

The rooms are being tastefully decorated, and the work is graded and one can easily note the kind of work of each grade.

COMPLAINT IS MADE OF COUNTRY STORE KEEPERS

Who Have Large Crowds of Loafers Congregating and Desecrating Sabbath

Several complaints have been made to the authorities concerning country store keepers keeping open on Sunday.

It is claimed that some of the store-keepers in the country towns continually desecrate the Sabbath by having their places of business open during church hours, where a large crowd of loafers habitually congregate on Sunday morning.

COMPLAINING ON PHONE SERVICE

The "Knocker," Who is Ever With Us, Makes a Life Size Roar

SOME COMPLAIN ALWAYS

Narrow Mindedness Displayed by Short Sighted Thick Skulls Regarding the System

Complaints are being made by the "chronic kicker" on the service of the Co-operative Telephone company. The experts who had charge of the cut-over here declared the Rushville plant to be the most complete and as free from errors of wiring as any they ever installed. It must be a narrow minded man indeed who cannot appreciate that a complicated plant like the automatic cannot be put in perfect running without a several weeks experience. Hundreds of wires were stretched and hundreds of small but vital pieces of machinery make up the system and any sane person should readily concede that mistakes in installation were likely to occur. All are being righted in an expedient and thorough manner, and it will not be many days until the word perfect will be singing over the wires.

Have patience, common sense and don't be a "knocker."

SURELY WAS OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW

Parents Object to Groom 52 Years of Age—"Ah Shucks!"

Persuading her uncle, with whom she lived, to drive her over to Morristown to do some shopping, Miss Stella Shuck, 28 years old, who resides on a farm near there, met her lover, Lemuel Ball, 52 years old, and the pair eloped to Shelbyville and were married. They went on to Indianapolis, where they will remain a few days preparatory to a wedding trip to Oklahoma. Both bride and groom are well known in that section. The girl's relatives opposed her marriage to Ball.

SCHOOLS HONOR QUAKER POET

Familiar Works of John Greenleaf Whittier Were Recited Today

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

All the Schools of the Land Pay Tribute to Singer of Simple Life

Today being the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Greenleaf Whittier, the schools throughout the land are doing him honor by devoting the day to part of the day with a recitation of the Quaker poet's favorite quotations and writings.

At the Graham high school this morning, Rev. J. F. Cowling conducted chapel exercises in the auditorium. He read a lesson from the Proverbs and spoke effectively on "Opportunity." His message was that we must seize every opportunity presented to us, and that success in life depended upon hard work.

At the local schools the pupils read Whittier's poems today and sang the songs of that New Englander who wrote the stories of simplicity which touches the heart strings.

His early poems dealt with the joys and sorrows of the simple life of the New Englander. Throughout his poetry runs the golden thread of sympathy with honorable labor and enforced poverty, and many poems are inspired by it. Poems familiar to children are "The Barefoot Boy," "Barbara Fritchie," "The Corn Song," and "Snow Bound."

ONE OF DISTRICTS HAD NO ELECTION

New Law Did Not Have Desired Effect On the Road Supervisors

The election for road supervisors in Rushville township Saturday was unusually quiet. The new law passed by the last State legislature, which gives the supervisor an increase in salary did not have the desired effect, especially in this township.

All the officers were filled by Republicans. In one of the districts there was no election, as but two men were present and the trustee, Ed Crosby had to make a supervisor by appointment. At another voting place there was no opposition to the candidate.

In road district No. 1, Wood Bishop (Rep.) was the only candidate and was elected without opposition. In district No. 2 the two candidates, H. G. Sampson and Lewis Krammes. The former was elected. At district No. 3, Thomas Stark defeated J. D. Thompson, but the election was very quiet.

There being only two at the voting place of district No. 4, no election was held and Trustee Crosby appointed David Sloan, the retiring supervisor to the same office for the coming term.

WRECK ON THE C. H. & D. CAUSED DELAY IN TRAIN

Departure of Magnificent Fleet Afforded Naval Pageant Never to Be Forgotten.

Old Point Comfort, Va., Dec. 17.—Sixteen hard-hitting steel-belted American battleships, gun-bristling and burly of girth, but sparkling white in their immaculate dressings of peace, have sailed away under the dazzling sun of a cloudless winter sky on their famous twin-sea expedition of 14,000 miles, along foreign shores and changing climes, to the west coast of the United States. President Roosevelt, on the bridge of his cruiser-yacht, the Mayflower, personally led the magnificent four-mile line of fighting vessels during the first stage of the voyage. From the anchorage ground in Hampton Roads to the horseshoe bend of Chesapeake bay, his eagle-crested flag of blue pointed the way to the fleet's new home at the Golden Gate. Then, when the wide reaches of the sea were visible through the wide-swinged capes of Virginia, he turned aside and, coming to anchor, reviewed the passing pageant.

The blue of the sky, the stretch of green sea-miles, the glistening of spotless hulls, the curl of foam-crested bow-waves, the cheering of sailors afloat and friends ashore, the breezy blown strains of "Auld Lang Syne" floating across the waters, the blare of trumpets, the ruffle of drums, the flash of signals and the boom of saluting cannon marked the departure of the fleet, presenting to the people who watched a spectacle they will never forget and to the world at large the reality of the trimmest, snuggest, most homogeneous, most thoroughly equipped, most mobile and self-reliant assemblage of first-class battleships ever gathered in one command.

Before departure Admiral Evans, commander-in-chief of the departing fleet, was helped over the side of the Mayflower to where the president stood waiting, and, bringing his right hand to a saluting position, paid his formal respects and gave his personal assurance that the ships of his command were ready for their trip to the other side of the hemisphere. President Roosevelt acknowledged the salute with lifted hat and accepted the formal words of greeting as stiffly as they were uttered. Then with the brief ceremony ended, he grasped Admiral Evans' hand and gave it the heartiest of shakes. The two conversed together informally for a moment or two until other arriving flag and commanding officers set the reception into full swing. When Admiral Evans was about to take his leave and get the fleet under way the president followed him to the gangway and then called him aside for nearly five minutes of earnest conversation. The president spoke with his usual emphasis and the admiral listened intently with a constant affirmative nod of his head. In parting with the officers of the fleet, President Roosevelt was wholly informal and to each had a cordial handclasp, a grasp of the uniformed shoulder and a hearty "Good-bye, old fellow, and good luck."

The Old Point shores and the ramparts of historic old Fortress Monroe were lined with thousands of persons as the fleet lifted anchor and set sail. Other thousands were gathered aboard excursion craft of all descriptions. The government pier projecting far out into the Roads at Old Point, was a living mass of humanity. In the crowd were gathered wives, sisters, and sweethearts of officers and enlisted men, all feeling the common impulse of mingled admiration for the vast marine picture unfolded before them and the heart-burnings of a long parting with relatives and friends. It was peculiarly fitting, therefore, that when the flagship Connecticut swept by the pier, the band assembled on the quarterdeck should play "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and then more plaintively came the strains of "Auld Lang Syne," followed in turn by "The Star Spangled Banner." It was a pretty indication that amid the regrets of parting, the call of patriotic duty was at last the one thing to be considered.

The president, after the review at the Horseshoe was completed, returned to Washington, the Mayflower weighing anchor for the trip up the Potomac shortly after the fleet had cleared the capes and had begun in earnest the most notable practice cruise in all naval history.

FOREIGNERS INTERESTED

Close Watch Will Be Kept on Progress of "Fighting Bob."

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The naval expert of the Berliner Tageblatt has published an article in which he says that the voyage of the American battleship squadron to the Pacific will be followed with the keenest attention in the admiralties of Europe and that European experts will draw the most valuable lessons from the solution of the various problems before the American warships. Rojestvensky's expedition is alluded to by the writer as useful only in showing how not to do it. The most interesting part of the voyage to navigators will be the passage of the Straits of Magellan, if this route is chosen, for every seaman knows the difficulties that passage offers a single ship.

It is only natural the American naval department should draw a veil of deep secrecy over all the details of this voyage, undertaken in full preparation for action," the naval expert writes. "The naval attaches at Washington will consequently take all the greater care to report all news from the ports of call regarding coaling, the speed of the vessels, or damages to the ships or their machinery."

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS

Tillman Relieves Himself of an Accumulation of Bills.

Washington, Dec. 17.—A speech by Senator Tillman, filled with denunciation of the president, the secretary of the treasury and the department of justice, of financiers and "captains of industry," was the chief subject of interest in the senate Monday. His remarks were based on his resolutions directing an investigation by the committee on finance of the recent bond issued by the treasury department and of the issuance of clearing house certificates throughout the country.

Senator Culberson introduced a resolution directing a congressional investigation of the cause of the present financial stringency and calling on the committee on finance of the senate to recommend measures for the immediate relief of the country. He desired to have this resolution considered at once, but in the absence of Senator Aldrich, chairman of the committee on finance, it was allowed to go over.

The house session was limited to twenty-five minutes and little business beyond the introduction of bills was transacted. Both houses agreed to adjourn on Saturday for the Christmas holidays, the recess to continue until Jan. 6. The house then adjourned until Thursday.

Suggests a Commission.

Washington, Dec. 17.—To forestall any hasty action with respect to banking and currency legislation at the present session of congress, Representative Burgess of Texas has introduced a resolution providing for the appointment by the president of a banking and currency commission to be composed of nine members whose duties it shall be to hold public hearings touching the banking and currency laws of the country in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Denver, Dallas, New Orleans and Atlanta, and such other hearings as may be desirable, and to file with the house of representatives at a date not later than Dec. 1, 1908, a report covering their recommendations as to the best possible standing system.

It is provided that not more than four of the members of the commission shall belong to one political party.

Walker Still at Large.

Sandiego, Cal., Dec. 17.—It has been learned that, in spite of reports to the contrary, Wm. F. Walker, wanted for the embezzlement of $565,000 in securities, the property of the New Britain Connecticut Savings bank, is still at large. From advices of an authentic nature received here from Ensensada it is learned that Walker was not in that city, had not been arrested there, nor was he in Tiajana, as was supposed.

Signed Written Statement.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 17.—Samuel and Ada Lewis, who were arrested here Thursday last for passing raised bills, have signed a written statement of guilt, which is in possession of Captain Halls of the secret service. Halls has been on their track for some time. Lewis confesses that he worked Hartford City, Anderson, Muncie and other points besides this city. He professed to be a corn doctor. The man and wife were arraigned and committed for federal grand jury action.

Murder and Suicide.

New York, Dec. 17.—A murder and suicide in an automobile cab occurred on the streets of Brooklyn last night. The victims in the tragedy were Elsie Kerlin, a telegraph operator, twenty-two years of age, and Bernard E. Wallace, who has been employed by the Commercial Cable company in this city. No cause for the tragedy is known, but it is probable it is the result of a love affair. The chauffeur heard two shots inside the cab. Opening the door, he found the woman lying on the floor with a bullet in her right temple. The man had died from a bullet wound in the mouth.

To Cut Down Expenses.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The secretary of the interior has furnished the senate with a statement concerning the proposed abolition of pensions agencies and the project of leaving the payment of pensions to one agency. By leaving the matter to the commissioner of pensions and one disbursing officer, the cost of payment could be reduced to $350,000 per annum. The secretary recommends the abolition of eighteen agencies.

Rescue Work Proceeding Slowly.

Eli, Neb., Dec. 17.—The work of releasing the three entombed miners in the Alpha shaft is proceeding slowly owing to the great danger to the rescuers of a second cave-in. The men are in very little danger from any source, as they are above the water level, and have plenty of food and water and are now supplied with three cots which were sent down in sections through the water-pipe.

DEATH IN A MINE

Sixty Coal Diggers Perish Miserably In an Alabama Colliery.

AN EXPLOSION OF DUST

This Is Thought to Have Caused Disaster at the Works of Yolande Coal and Coke Company.

Mine But a Few Miles From Virginia City Where 112 Were Killed Two Years Ago.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 17.—Advices from Yolande indicate that about sixty men met death by the explosion in the mines at that place yesterday. The work of recovery is very slow and while hundreds of miners from the adjacent mining camps are present to assist, it is thought that all of the dead cannot be gotten out before to-night.

So far the cause of the explosion has not been determined. The mine has in the past been pronounced free from gas by the state mine inspectors, and it is supposed that the explosion was caused by dust. When a mine is not properly sprinkled and the air is allowed to get filled with fine coal-dust, particles of it become almost as explosive as gas itself. Not until three hours after the explosion was it possible to venture even near the mouth of the mine, so hot was the air that was rushing out.

The explosion was below the second right sub-entry. The mines go down something like 1,500 feet. There was a terrific explosion, the force of which was seen outside, dust and timber being blown out in great quantities, destroying small buildings near by and also landing on the depot some little distance away. There was a terrific heat wave immediately after the explosion.

Officials of the company on the scene immediately took steps to start a rescue party to get to the men on the inside. The fans were started up and other methods taken to eliminate the bad air. Within an hour fourteen men had crawled out of the mine and their description of the inside was heartrending. Several of these men were badly burned. Two hours after the explosion it was still impossible to venture even near the mouth of the mine, so hot was the air that was rushing out.

Yolande mine is but a few miles from Virginia City, where a similar explosion occurred about two years ago, 112 men being killed at that time. Yolande is thirty-five miles south of Birmingham on the Birmingham Mineral railroad. The Yolande Coal and Coke company is headed by Dr. G. B. Crowe of Birmingham. The Yolande mines were among the model collieries of the

The Future of Life Insurance.

By DARWIN P. KINGSLEY, President of the New York Life Insurance Company.

THE FUTURE OF LIFE INSURANCE IS MENACED BY REFORM THROUGH DESTRUCTION. WHEN WILL THE JUSTICE OF STATESMANSHIP, WHICH WOULD REFORM BY CONSERVATION, TAKE THE PLACE OF THE ACTION OF THE POLITICIAN, WHO THINKS HE HAS REFORMED WHEN HE HAS DESTROYED?

What shall we say of the political leader who fashions a cunning appeal to all the baser passions of the human heart? What shall we say of the organ of public opinion which DELIBERATELY MISSTATES FACTS, garbles testimony, destroys reputations and cultivates suspicion and hate, which always lie near to the surface of human feeling, and DELIBERATELY brings on a social tempest in order to sell its wares? What shall we say of the great magazine which, professing to put before the world a dispassionate review of life insurance and life insurance companies, REFUSES TO SEE RESPONSIBLE LIFE INSURANCE MEN, apparently from fear that the truth in possession might deprive its article of certain sensational features?

THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN LIFE INSURANCE IS AS CERTAIN AS THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN CIVILIZATION. IT MUST GO ON BECAUSE CONJUGAL AFFECTION WILL GO ON. IT FITS INTO THE PLANS OF A BUSY WORLD, AND THIS IS A VERY BUSY WORLD.

Life is more productive, more generous, more effective, sweeter, HAPPIER; values are more certain, securities more abundant and better than ever before. American life insurance, with all its faults, HAS SEEN THE OPPORTUNITY AND THE NEED and splendidly answered both. Therefore it must go on. It DESERVES to go on because when subjected to the severest tests it is found to have been HONEST, SOUND AND IN THE HIGHEST SENSE USEFUL. It must go on because it performs now and is able to perform a function in civilization which has not been given to any other business.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Chairman Taggart and his personal political lieutenants, who, it was reported, were using Stokes Jackson of Greenfield as a stalking horse in the race for the chairmanship of the Democratic state committee, will stand by him to the finish, according to an authoritative announcement made here today. Taggart has no plan for switching from Jackson to John W. Kern or Michael Ryan of Indianapolis, as was charged by the men who are opposing him. A number of Taggart workers from outlying districts met him here yesterday to discuss the situation. They were asked to work for Jackson and they were told that Jackson's chances of winning are very good. The Taggart men declared that there will not be to exceed three votes against Jackson on the final ballot. Michael Ryan said that he is not a candidate for state chairman and has no plans whatever for entering the race. Taggart declared before his departure for French Lick that Vice President Fairbanks is in the lead in the race for the Republican nomination for president. He was in New York last week and he says that prominent members of the Republican party there are predicting the nomination of Fairbanks. It was asserted by Taggart, however, that Bryan will carry Indiana, even if Fairbanks is nominated by the Republicans.

United States District Attorney Jos. A. Kealing will be a candidate for delegate to the Republican national convention from this district. He is Vice President Fairbanks' political manager and it is said that he wants to be a member of the Indiana delegation so he may be in position to do more effective work in behalf of the Fairbanks presidential boom. Kealing has been the chief promoter of the Fairbanks boom for the past three years. He has been from one end of the country to the other setting up pins for his chief, and he is credited with making the combination at Washington that resulted in the national committee giving the convention to Chicago instead of Kansas City. It has been the understanding that Mayor Charles A. Bookwalter and Fred Gardner would be the delegates from this district, but according to the program mapped out by Kealing's friends it is declared that he will be a candidate for the place that had been reserved for Gardner.

Warren Sayre of Wabash, one of the picturesque figures in the Republican party, who was known for several years as the "watchdog of the state treasury," is here calling on state officials and other party leaders. He was twice defeated for the nomination for governor, but some of his friends asked him if he would make another race. "I gave the state two chances to show its appreciation of me," said Mr. Sayre, "but it turned them down. I have made up my mind that the state shall be deprived of another chance to make me governor, and I shall never be a candidate again." Sayre, however, is enjoying fully the efforts of the candidates for governor.

Fattening a Possum For the President.
A fat Georgia possum is to be sent to President Roosevelt for his Christmas dinner, says a Gainesville (Ga.) correspondent of the New York Sun. This possum was caught some days ago and is being fattened on persimmons by Mrs. Helen Longstreet, postmistress of Gainesville, who will ship it to the White House in time for Christmas. Mrs. Longstreet is the widow of the Confederate General Longstreet.

THE SONG OF THE SHIRT.
WITH fingers weary and worn,
With eyelids heavy and red,
A woman sat, in unwomanly rags,
Plying her needle and thread.
Stitch, stitch, stitch,
In poverty, hunger and dirt,
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch
She sang the "Song of the Shirt!"

"Work, work, work!
While the cock is crowing aloof,
And work, work, work,
Till the stars shine through the roof!
It's oh to be a slave!
Along with the barbarous Turk,
Where woman has never a soul to save,
If this is Christian work!"

"Work, work, work.
Till the brain begins to swim!
Work, work, work,
Till the eyes are heavy and dim!
Seam and gusset and band,
Band and gusset and seam,
Till over the buttons I fall asleep
And sew them on in a dream!"

"O men with sisters dear!
O men with mothers and wives!
It is not linen you're wearing out,
But human creatures' lives!
Stitch, stitch, stitch,
In poverty, hunger and dirt,
Sewing at once, with a double thread,
A shroud as well as a shirt!"

"Work, work, work!
My labor never flags,
And what are its wages? A bed of straw,
A crust of bread—and rags,
That shattered roof—and this naked floor!
A table—a broken chair—
And wall so blank my shadow I thank
For sometimes falling there!"

"Oh, but for one short hour—
A respite, however brief!
No blessed leisure for love or hope,
But only time for grief!
A little weeping would ease my heart,
But in their briny bed
My tears must stop, for every drop
Hinders needle and thread!"

With fingers weary and worn,
With eyelids heavy and red,
A woman sat, in unwomanly rags,
Plying her needle and thread.
Stitch, stitch, stitch,
In poverty, hunger and dirt,
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch
Would that its tone could reach the rich—
She sang this "Song of the Shirt!"

LOVE'S CHOICE.

HE that loves a rosy cheek,
Or a coral lip admires,
Or from starlike eyes doth seek
Fuel to maintain its fires,
As Old Time makes these decay,
So his flames must waste away.

BUT a smooth and steadfast mind,
Gentle thoughts and calm desires,
Hearts with equal love combined
Kindle never dying fires.
Where these are not, I despise
Lovely cheeks or lips or eyes.

OLDHAM BOY SHOOTS SISTER

A Humble Heroine.

By MARION LEWIS.

Copyrighted, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

Thirteen-Year-Old Lad Fires Lead Missile in Sister's Back

WOUND IS NOT FATAL

Children Were to be in a Christmas Entertainment and Had Taken Gun Along

"Step out in front of me and let me see if I can shoot you," said thirteen-year-old Walter Oldham to his sister May, aged seven, while the two were on the way to school this morning, near their home just over the Rush county line in Fayette county.

The little sister did as she was bid and the boy fired. The girl fell in the road, suffering from a bullet wound, but fortunately it struck her in the back and will not prove fatal.

The two children were to appear in a Christmas entertainment and the boy had been detailed as a "property man," among other things he was to secure a revolver. He found one at home, and taking it along, whittled the lead off an old cartridge until it was even with the shell. It was with this missile that the girl was struck. Young Oldham contends that he thought he had made a "blank" of the cartridge after the fashion of "show people."

They have many relatives in Rush county.

FOREST FROM SEED.

Oklahoman Now Has Flourishing Tract of 80,000 Catalpa Trees.

J. W. Bird's venture in starting a catalpa forest has proved very successful for the first year, says a Pond Creek (Okla.) dispatch to the New York Herald. He bought raw land in the sand hills just east of Pond Creek for his project and broke it up last winter and spring.

He planted about 3,000 seeds, expecting to get about one-fourth that number of plants. He now has between eighty and one hundred thousand vigorous, healthy young trees of an average height of about three feet. Next spring he will transplant, and if the trees come through the winter well he expects to have about eighty acres in

As an illustration of what remarkable growth the tree will make in this soil and climate Mr. Bird has in his office a tree cut by W. H. Farmer, who lives one mile from the former's catalpa farm. Last April Mr. Farmer cut back a two-year-old seedling, and since then the tree has made a growth of ten feet six inches.

TO SAVE LA BAHIA MISSION.

Movement on Foot For State to Buy Historic Texas Building.

The ancient La Bahia mission building, situated near Goliad, Tex., is to be rehabilitated and preserved if the movement succeeds which has been started among patriotic Texans with those purposes in view, says the Kansas City Star. In this ancient building, on May 7, 1836, 300 men under command of Colonel Fannin were massacred by a large force of Mexicans at Santa Anna's orders. The walls of the church were stained with the blood of the men who were striving to gain their country's liberty from Mexico. The news of this massacre aroused the Texans and gave them the frenzied courage which soon afterward resulted in the overwhelming defeat of Santa Anna's army and capture of the Mexican commander, whose life was saved only through the timely interference of General Sam Houston.

In all the years that have passed since that massacre, during the period that Texas was a republic and since she became a state, the historic edifice has remained uncared for except for such little attention as was shown it by the few poor but devout Mexican worshippers who gathered at its altar on Sundays and the various saints' days.

The movement now on foot seeks to have the state purchase La Bahia mission from those who claim title to it and to permit it to be cared for by the Daughters of the Texas Republic, as the historic Alamo building now is. Owing to its remote location comparatively few people visit La Bahia mission. Those who enter the building first must pay a fee to the Mexican who is in charge of the place. The interior of the mission edifice is much the same as it was when the massacre left the walls bespattered with blood more than seventy years ago.

hurry. He had come to pass the summer on the mountain. He roamed and rested. He visited other cabins and made friends of all he came in contact with. As they found him one day, so they found him the next. There were those who could not understand why he should interest himself in such a pursuit—why any one should particularly care about birds and squirrels and flowers—but they liked and trusted the man for all that. It came at last that even the owners of some of the hidden stills talked of inviting him to visit them.

For three long months Nancy lived in a new world. There had been physical and mental changes for the better. Unknown to even her mother, she tried to teach herself to read. Shoes and stockings were precious things among the people of the mountain, but never since that first day had Williams seen her barefooted. She had made herself a new sunbonnet. She had sewed a flounce on her best dress. She had made a bow to wear at her throat. She had cleared her hair of tangles and felt a wave of pride sweep over her as she caught the young man looking at her admiringly. She slyly watched him as he ate, and she tried to copy him. He had seen these things and a hundred others, and they had made him smile. He had treated her in a way as an equal and in a way as a child. He had been friendly, but he had never talked love. He had told her of romance and adventure, of the great world to which she was a stranger, but not with any intent to make her dissatisfied with her surroundings.

Had he been a bit more observing he would have seen the growth of new sentiments and aspirations that she lacked the womanly ingenuity to conceal, but he went on regarding her as a child.

One evening he announced that on the next morning he must take his departure. Together they sat on the doorstep in the moonlight and looked down over the forests and peaks and were very quiet. At first he told her of the great ocean lying hundreds of miles away, of the great cities teeming with human life, of the wonders she might see some day behold, and she crowded closer to him like a child. Then she sighed and sighed and sighed and moved away. By and by she entered the cabin and sought her bed without a word. She did not appear at breakfast. She had risen and gone out. He waited half an hour to say goodby, but as she did not come he shouldered his pack and set out.

Half a mile down the trail he found her. She was seated on a rock at a bend where they had often sat and rested and talked.

"Come down, Nancy. I want to say goodby," he called.

She came slowly, and he saw her as he had seen her on that first day. Her hair was hanging down her back, stockings and shoes were conspicuously absent, and bow and flounce were missing. Not exactly as he had seen her on that first day, for now she had been weeping.

"Why, Nancy, what is it?" he asked as he took her hand.

"It's—it's that I can't read!" she almost wailed. "It's that I can't write, can't talk, can't go nowhere. It's that I am nuthin' nor nobody. It's that I am pore and shackley and ignorant and have got to live and die yere. It's—it's—"

"But, Nancy"—he began, and then, realizing her feelings, he knew not what to add.

"You'll never come ag'in?" she quailed.

"Perhaps not."

"And I'll have no one—no one!"

Her eyes were cast down and her tears falling as he held her hand. By and by he softly said:

"I didn't know it till just now, Nancy."

"But it can't be," she replied as she raised her head and threw her hair back. "It can't be no more than the eagle and the crow. You—you are everything; I am nuthin'—nuthin' but pore and ignorant and shackley, just fit for such a life as this."

Then she bent forward and kissed him, wrenched her hand away and fled up the trail and left him looking after her and pondering and feeling such a pity as he would never feel for woman again. He heard her whistling among the rocks. She was fighting herself; he heard her laughing. She was going back to the old life with a breaking heart. And knew she was right.

A Rather Necessary Question.

Ordinarily Mr. Lawton was a reasonably good tempered man, but hot weather did not agree with him, and under the stress of it he became irritable and most unhappy.

"I never saw anything like some of these countrymen!" he grumbled one day, when he returned from a fishing expedition. He had started when the wind was east and the sky overcast, only to have the wind die down and the sun come out hot and blinding, and his feelings were injured in consequence.

"What is the matter now?" inquired his wife, as she hastily removed some work from the chair toward which she saw his feet were tending.

"Why, I asked a farmer out on the Greenham turnpike, not more than three miles away from Long pond, whether I was half way there, and he said in the most indifferent way that he wasn't prepared to tell, but he'd like to know where I was stopping."

"Well, didn't you tell him?" quavered Mrs. Lawton, her face half hidden in her handkerchief.

"Tell him? No! What business was it of his, particularly when he'd refused to answer a civil question?" said Mr. Lawton indignantly. "I just stumped along till I came to a guidepost. They're the most disoliging lot!"—Youth's Companion.

Dining Room Extension Table is Said to be a Valuable Invention

The corn and stock judging school and school of domestic science opened with a full swing at the morning session today. The attendance was large at the several meeting places, and much interest shown by the farmers.

W. A. Cochell spoke this afternoon at the Grand theatre on "Pig Feeding," and he was followed by Prof. Arthur Gose, another member of the experimental station "Soil Improvement."

The judging and scoring of corn and stock attracted quite a deal of attention, especially the latter, for a large crowd was in attendance at the Sherman pavillion during the entire session.

Tonight at the assembly room in the court house, Dr. W. E. Stone, president of the Purdue University will speak on "The Relation of Purdue University to Indiana Agriculture." A large crowd should turn out and hear this distinguished man. Orchestra music has been secured and no admission will be charged.

The school of domestic science is having interesting sessions, and on Thursday will have something that will be of interest to every housewife in the county.

Much interest is shown in the scoring of corn by the members of the Boys Corn club. They have their exhibit in the court house.

"Continue!" cried the Baronet, sharply.

"I read the names," said the American with evident distaste, "and the family name of each was the same. They were the names of two Brothers. One is well known to you. It is that of the African explorer of whom this gentleman was just speaking. I mean the Earl of Chetney. The other was the name of his brother, Lord Arthur Chetney."

The men at the table fell back as though a trapdoor had fallen open at their feet.

"Lord Chetney?" they exclaimed in chorus. They glanced at each other and back to the American with every expression of concern and disbelief.

"It is impossible!" cried the Baronet. "Why, my dear sir, young Chetney only arrived from Africa yesterday. It was so stated in the evening papers."

The jaw of the American set in a resolute square, and he pressed his lips together.

"You are perfectly right, sir," he said, "Lord Chetney did arrive in London yesterday morning, and yesterday night I found his dead body."

The youngest member present was the first to recover. He seemed much less concerned over the identity of the murdered man than at the interruption of the narrative.

"Oh, please let him go on!" he cried. "What happened then? You say you found two visiting cards. How do you know which card was that of the murdered man?"

The American, before he answered, waited until the chorus of exclamations had ceased. Then he continued as though he had not been interrupted.

"The instant I read the names upon the cards," he said, "I ran to the screen and, kneeling beside the dead man, began a search through his pockets. My hand at once fell upon a card-case, and I found on all the cards it contained the title of the Earl of Chetney. His watch and cigarette-case also bore his name. These evidences, and the fact of his bronzed skin, and that his cheekbones were worn with fever, convinced me that the dead man was the African explorer, and the boy who had fled past me in the night was Arthur, his younger brother."

"I was so intent upon my search that I had forgotten the servant, and I was still on my knees when I heard a cry behind me. I turned, and saw the man gazing down at the body in abject horror.

"Before I could rise, he gave another cry of terror, and, flinging himself into the hall, raced toward the door to the street. I leaped after him, shouting to him to halt, but before I could reach the hall he had torn open the door, and I saw him spring out into the yellow fog. I cleared the steps in a jump and ran down the garden walk just as the gate clicked in front of me. I had it open on the instant, and, following the sound of the man's footsteps, I raced after him across the open street. He, also, could hear me, and he instantly stopped running, and there was absolute silence. He was so near that I almost fancied I could hear him panting, and I held my own breath to listen. But I could distinguish nothing but the dripping of the mist about us, and from far off the music of the Hungarian band, which I had heard when I first lost myself.

"All I could see was the square of light from the door I had left open behind me, and a lamp in the hall beyond it flickering in the draught. But even as I watched it, the flame of the lamp was blown violently to and fro, and the door, caught in the same current of air, closed slowly. I knew if it shut I could not again enter the house, and I rushed madly toward it. I believe I even shouted out, as though it were something human which I could compel to obey me, and then I caught my foot against the curb and smashed into the sidewalk. When I rose to my feet I was dizzy and half stunned, and though I thought then that I was moving toward the door, I know now that I probably turned directly from it; for, as I groped about in the night, calling frantically for the police, my fingers touched nothing but the dripping fog, and the iron railings for which I sought seemed to have melted away. For many minutes I beat the mist with my arms like one at blind man's buff, turning sharply in circles, cursing aloud at my stupidity and crying continually for help. At last a voice answered me from the fog, and I found myself held in the circle of a policeman's lantern.

"That is the end of my adventure. What I have to tell you now is what I learned from the police.

"At the station-house to which the man guided me I related what you have just heard. I told them that the house they must at once find was set back from the street within a radius of two hundred yards from the Knightsbridge Barracks, that within fifty yards of it some one was giving a dance to the music of a Hungarian band, and that the railings before it were as high as a man's waist and filed to a point. With that to work upon, twenty men were at once ordered out into the fog to search for the house, and Inspector Lyle himself was dispatched to the home of Lord Edam, Chetney's father, with a warrant for Lord Arthur's arrest. I was thanked and dismissed on my own recognition.

"This morning Inspector Lyle called on me, and from him I learned the police theory of the scene I have just described.

"Apparently I had wandered very far in the fog, for up to noon to-day the house had not been found, nor had they been able to arrest Lord Arthur. He did not return to his father's house last night, and there is no trace of him; but from what the police knew of the past lives of the people I found in that lost house, they have evolved a theory, and their theory is that the murders were committed by Lord Arthur.

"IT IS MOST IMPORTANT THAT I PROCEED TO THE HOUSE."

"The infatuation of his elder brother, Lord Chetney, for a Russian princess, so Inspector Lyle tells me, is well known to every one. About two years ago the Princess Zichy, as she calls herself, and he were constantly together, and Chetney informed his friends that they were about to be married. The woman was notorious in two continents, and when Lord Edam heard of his son's infatuation he appealed to the police for her record.

"It is through his having applied to them that they know so much concerning her and her relations with the Chetneys. From the police Lord Edam learned that Madame Zichy had once been a spy in the employ of the Russian Third Section, but that lately she had been repudiated by her own government and was living by her wits, by blackmail, and by her beauty. Lord Edam laid this record before his son, but Chetney either knew it already or the woman persuaded him not to believe in it, and the father and son parted in great anger. Two days later the marquis altered his will, leaving all of his money to the younger brother, Arthur.

"The title and some of the landed property he could not keep from Chetney, but he swore if his son saw the woman again that the will should stand as it was, and he would be left without a penny.

ABLEST OF TRAINERS

James G. Rowe, Handler of Keene's Noted Racing Stable.

FOR A YEAR'S WORK, $55,000.

Detailed Account of Career of This Sensationally Successful Turfman, Who Has Been Jockey and Starter. Rode Harry Bassett.

Although the salary paid by Mr. Keene to Rowe as trainer is necessarily known to only the two persons most concerned, it is matter of common gossip that it is not less than $12,000 annually, and this added to the usual 10 per cent of gross winnings makes Rowe's earnings this year at least $52,000. Besides this, there has usually been an arrangement that a percentage of the money realized by the sale of horses in training also is included in the trainer's compensation. This would add about $3,000 more, so that the erstwhile Virginia employee of Colonel David McDaniel this year earns more than is paid to the president of the United States. The latter, by the way, works no harder in his especial avocation than does Rowe or any other first class trainer with half a million dollars' worth of race horses under his immediate care each season.

JAMES G. ROWE.

James Rowe rode for Colonel McDaniel in the early seventies, and there are still to be found in some old fashion sporting resorts colored pictures of the race between Longfellow and Harry Bassett at Monmouth park,

Long Branch, N. J., in 1872, when the former was ridden by the negro jockey Sample, wearing the John Harper orange jacket, while Rowe is shown in the McDowell "blue, red sash," his right hand raised in the air, grasping a whip with which he is laboring the sides of the beaten son of Lexington.

Five or six years later he attracted the attention of the Messrs. Dwyer, who were then at the commencement of their wonderful career on the turf, and they turned over to the young horseman a stable which included Bramble, who really was the first horse to earn large sums of money for the brothers, though of course their purchase for $25,000 of the two three-year-olds Vigil and Brother to Bassett in the fall of 1876 first drew attention to the ambitious character of their turf plans.

Rowe resigned from employment with the Dwyers in 1885 and for a time was a free lance trainer. He owned a few horses himself, trained a little for L. O. Appleby, and about the year 1887 he first acted as starter. This was at the old Bennington track, where a three weeks' race meeting was carried on with about a hundred horses to make up the fields. Then came an opportunity to handle the stable of the first August Belmont, and Rowe made a great success of that.

The death of Mr. Belmont in 1890, due to a cold contracted at the horse show, again put Rowe on the market, though not for long, as he became starter for the board of control and acted as steward at the old Bay district track at San Francisco.

His engagement with Mr. Keene began about 1899, and the list of great races won for that turfman with Rowe as trainer would take up much space. It was reserved for the current year for Mr. Keene's record breaking earnings to reach the vicinity of the $400,000 mark. In nine years' connection with the Keene horses nearly $2,000,000 has been won by them under Rowe's able management. At one time Rowe was largely interested in the managerial department of comic opera.

Rowe had a very successful career as a starter, which began through a chance remark. In the fall of 1890, down at the Coney Island (N. Y.) track, Trainers W. P. Burch and W. B. Jennings of Washington were talking about the need of a starter for the Washington meeting. Rowe laughingly said: "Let me see. Your meeting doesn't come off till after Oct. 15, and I'll be through racing then. I'll have nothing to do, so I might as well go over and start for you."

His words were considered seriously and resulted in his going over to Washington as starter. He did so well that he was asked to start at Clifton, N. J. He again officiated at the Bennington course in the following spring, at Brighton Beach and Buffalo and later at Baltimore, always with success.

Pork Barrel Many Years Old.
A pork barrel in use for 225 years was recently discovered in Torrington, Conn., says the New York Sun. The relic that has been the burial place of succeeding generations of Connecticut hogs belongs to Uri Whiting, to whom it was presented lately by Lucian Burr, who removed from Torrington to Stratford within the last few weeks. It had been a part of the Burr family furniture for over eighty years.

According to the record that goes with the barrel, Zebulon Curtis took it into Torrington when he removed from Kensington in 1743. At that time it was recorded as being 100 years old. Since then it has been in constant use and has been handed down through the family by succeeding generations. The barrel is not only well preserved, but is said to have acquired a delicious flavor.

The Way of New York.
In New York you buy your theater tickets from a speculator for two prices, and after the show you bribe a waiter to bring you food for which you pay the jolly innkeeper two and one-half prices, after which you may be hauled home by a rheumatic horse if you pay the driver once for hauling you home and once for not getting down from his perch and booting you out of the hansom.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Man With Tact.
Casual Caller (to one next him)—I was introduced to that squat eyed, red haired woman over there as Mrs. Somebody or other. Don't you think the man was an idiot that married her? Next One (weekly)—I can't just say I'm the man.—Baltimore American.

POLICE GAVE UP

Threats of Death Too Much for Russian Officers.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 17.—An important series of arrests which the police of Finland have been carrying out at the request of the Russian authorities culminated in the capture of a number of terrorists while attempting secretly to cross the Finnish frontier into Russia. Documents seized with the prisoners showed that they had been connected previously with an unsuccessful conspiracy against the minister of justice, and it is thought they were now plotting against Premier Stolypin. The most compromising of these papers were immediately recovered by the revolutionists, who broke into the house of the chief of police at Terioki and forced him to give them up at the point of a revolver.

LED THE SIMPLE LIFE

Millionaire Who Didn't Believe in Modern Hurly-Burly.

Somerville, Mass., Dec. 17.—Benjamin Hadley, an eccentric millionaire, is dead at his home in East Somerville of old age. He was ninety years old, and never was married. He was born in Somerville, and it is said that only on one occasion did he ever travel beyond the greater Boston district. It was related of him that he never joined any kind of organization, never had his life insured, never purchased a ticket for any sort of entertainment, never ate a meal in a hotel or restaurant, and did not spend more than one dollar in his entire life for car fare. He had not voted for forty years. He wore a collar and necktie only on special occasions. He accumulated real estate valued at $1,500,000.

Knows Rifle's Whereabouts.

Georgetown, Ky., Dec. 17.—The famous Marlin rifle with which the shot which killed William Goebel is alleged to have been fired, may be produced in court, despite the fact that it has not been in evidence since the day Goebel was shot. In answer to questions of his attorney, Caleb Powers announced that he has information that the noted weapon is now in Georgetown. In answer to the questions put to Powers it developed that Powers had made an effort since 1903, when he was last tried, to find the Marlin rifle with which Goebel was killed; that he has succeeded; that he has not possession of the rifle, but that he has the information that it is in Georgetown.

Sold to Be in Missouri.

Jasonville, Ind., Dec. 17.—John Weathers, who has just returned from Moberly, Mo., and who formerly lived at Midland, reports that Louis Shuley, the old man who murdered W. A. Watson, merchant at Midland, and who made his escape from Sullivan county a year ago, is now working in the mines near Moberly, where he has been all summer. It was thought when Shuley fled from Midland he went to his former home in Kentucky. There was much excitement following the murder of Watson, and the sheriff, backed by an armed posse, searched diligently for two weeks for some trace of the fugitive, but without results.

Found Dead in Alley.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 17.—Frederick Widemann, sixty years old, a contracting stone and brick mason of this city, was found dead in an alley. Lying beside the body was a bottle labeled carbolic acid, while his mouth was found to be terribly burned. He is said to have been despondent because of loneliness.

CAUGHT PAW IN TRIGGER

Allen County Farmer Was Fatally Wounded In a Singular Hunting Accident Near Ft. Wayne.

Placed Cocked Gun on Log and His Dog Caught Foot in the Trigger Guard.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 17.—James Gerardot, a farmer of Jefferson township, is another victim of the hunting season, and the remarkable feature of it is that he was shot by his dog. He had traced a rabbit track a quarter of a mile from his home into a log and he placed his gun on top of the log while he tried to scare the rabbit out of the other end. The dog's foot became entangled in the guard of the trigger and in trying to free itself the gun was discharged. The charges from both barrels entered Mr. Gerardot's left thigh. He fell to the ground and the dog ran back as fast as possible to the farmhouse, where it whined piteously until it attracted attention. It then led several men of the farm to the scene of the accident and Mr. Gerardot was brought to the St. Joseph hospital, where his leg was amputated. He died a few hours later. Mr. Gerardot was married and was about thirty-five years old.

BREWERS PLEAD IN PRINT

Terre Haute "Suds" Dispensers Exhibit Evidences of Alarm.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 17.—The brewing people are thoroughly alarmed lest two wards in Terre Haute are made "dry," and are appealing to the general public through two-column articles daily in the newspapers to prevent the city being "put in the same class with Maine and Kansas towns, where prohibition does not prohibit and where taxes have gone up."

That the fight against the Anti-Saloon League movement is by brewery interests and does not include the whisky is evident from the emphasis on the good policy of drinking beer and letting whisky alone. "Now, any law that encourages the flask is a bad law," says one of the articles. It was also said that at Elwood, "through the intervention of the business men no more remonstrance blanks are to be circulated against the saloons for one year at least"; that it was found "the agitation was threatening to wreck the proposition to build a greater Elwood."

It is pointed out that $300,000 in wages is paid out by the breweries, that workmen in the beer and bottle glass factories receive $100,000 a year and that the city receives $60,000 a year in license fees.

Still the league is getting signatures as fast as it can call on the people. It is admitted that the league now has enough to close the forty saloons in the Third ward, which is the Fairbanks ward. The league has published a brief advertisement to warn the public against the articles which, the league says, are paid for at $50 each, and it also says "the Anti-Saloon League pays for this article."

The anti-saloon forces will be assisted this week by workers from other places in the state, headed by State Superintendent Shumaker. Canvassing has begun in the Second ward, whose Main street boundary takes in the leading downtown saloons of the city.

HOLIDAY CANDY TO BE COVERED

State Food Commissioner Makes Ruling the Small Boy will Resent

H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, has issued an order that candy dealers shall not permit candies to remain in their stores uncovered during the holiday season. Several merchants wrote to Mr. Barnard saying that the delay in handling candy caused by taking it from covered show cases when the sales are made makes it almost impossible to take care of the holiday trade. Mr. Barnard, in reply, said that he had no power to lift the order at a special time during the year, and that if it is necessary to keep the candy covered up in November it is also necessary to keep it covered up during the holidays.

A Record Breaker

Last Year's Sales of Hyomei, the Guaranteed Cure for Catarrh, Larger Than Ever.

So pronounced is the relief and cure following the use of Hyomei, that it has been publicly recommended by leading druggists and physicians in nearly every state and town in the country, with the result that last year's sales were larger than ever.

The fact that Hyomei is so simple and complete, and that it cures catarrh by breathing medicated air and not taking drugs into the stomach, no doubt has helped to create this widespread and rapidly increasing army of friends.

You do not risk a penny in testing the healing powers of Hyomei, for Johnson's Drug Store will sell you a dollar outfit with a distinct guarantee to refund the money if the treatment fails to give satisfaction.
